

Triggers Worksheet

Map your three trigger buckets and log cravings for three days · Module 1, Training 2

Before you start

A craving is a signal, not a weakness. This week's job is seeing, not changing. If you log a craving and then eat the thing, you completed the assignment. Consistent self-monitoring is one of the strongest predictors of success in changing eating habits (Burke et al., Journal of the American Dietetic Association).

Step 1 · The three buckets (40 XP: identify 3 triggers)

Tick every trigger that has shown up for you in the last two weeks, then circle the strongest one in each bucket.

EMOTIONAL (CORTISOL-DRIVEN; ADAM & EPEL, PHYSIOLOGY & BEHAVIOR)

- ☐ After a stressful conversation, email or meeting
- ☐ When bored, restless or procrastinating
- ☐ When lonely, or once everyone else has gone to bed
- ☐ When celebrating or rewarding myself ("I earned this")
- ☐ When sad, disappointed or after fertility news
- ☐ Other: _____

ENVIRONMENTAL (CUE-DRIVEN; BOSWELL & KOBER, OBESITY REVIEWS)

- ☐ Seeing food ads, social media, or cooking shows
- ☐ The candy dish / break room / office kitchen
- ☐ Driving past a particular bakery, drive-through or shop
- ☐ Sitting on the couch in front of a particular show
- ☐ Other people eating something near me
- ☐ Other: _____

PHYSIOLOGICAL (BODY-DRIVEN; LENNERZ ET AL., AJCN; GREER ET AL., NATURE COMMUNICATIONS)

- ☐ Mid-afternoon, a few hours after a high-carb or sugary lunch

- ☐ Late evening, especially after a short night's sleep
- ☐ When I've had little water all day
- ☐ When I skipped a meal or ate very little protein
- ☐ In the days before my period (women)
- ☐ Other: _____

My three triggers:

1. Emotional: _____
2. Environmental: _____
3. Physiological: _____

Step 2 · Three-day craving log (30 XP)

Log every craving you notice, whether or not you act on it. Write the time, what you wanted, what was happening, how strong it felt (1–10), and what you did. There is no wrong entry.

DAY 1 · DATE: _____ HOURS SLEPT LAST NIGHT: ____

TIME	WHAT I CRAVED	WHAT WAS HAPPENING (OUTSIDE ME / INSIDE ME)	STRENGTH 1–10	WHAT I DID

DAY 2 · DATE: _____ HOURS SLEPT LAST NIGHT: ____

TIME	WHAT I CRAVED	WHAT WAS HAPPENING (OUTSIDE ME / INSIDE ME)	STRENGTH 1–10	WHAT I DID

DAY 3 · DATE: _____ HOURS SLEPT LAST NIGHT: ____

TIME	WHAT I CRAVED	WHAT WAS HAPPENING (OUTSIDE ME / INSIDE ME)	STRENGTH 1–10	WHAT I DID

Step 3 · Read the pattern

- My cravings cluster at these times: _____

- The bucket that showed up most: ☐ Emotional ☐ Environmental ☐ Physiological
- On my shortest-sleep night, my cravings were: ☐ stronger ☐ the same ☐ weaker
- The craving I could most easily predict now: _____

The mindful first bite (from the video)

Look at it. Smell it. Place it on your tongue for one full breath without chewing. Chew slowly and notice the exact moment the flavour fades. Most of the pleasure lives in the first few seconds; the rest of the bag is chasing a feeling that has already gone (Katterman et al., Eating Behaviors).

Share in the forum (20 XP)

Post one pattern you noticed. Suggested opener: "My strongest bucket is _____ and my most predictable craving is _____ at _____." Reply to one other person with encouragement, not advice.

Preview of Module 2: physiological triggers respond to protein and fat at meals; emotional triggers respond to a two-minute pause; environmental triggers respond to rearranging what you can see. You'll get specific swaps there.
