

Meditation Audio Script & Daily Log

The 5-minute body scan (record as Meditation Audio.mp3) and a 7-day practice log · Module 4, Training 1

For the recording (≈5 minutes at about 90 words per minute)

Quiet room, warm and unhurried. Leave real silence at each [...]. This is the same text as the guided section of the Training 1 video; record it as a clean audio take for the embedded MP3.

Let your eyes close, or soften your gaze toward the floor. Take one slow breath in through your nose. [...] And let it out, slowly, through your mouth. [...]

Let your breathing return to its own rhythm now. You don't have to control it. Just notice it: the cool air at your nostrils, the gentle rise of your belly. [... three breaths ...]

Bring your attention to your feet. Notice whatever is there: warmth, pressure, tingling, or nothing at all. Nothing at all is fine. You're just visiting. [... two breaths ...]

Let your attention travel up through your calves and knees, to your thighs. Notice where your legs meet the chair or the floor. Let them be heavy. [... two breaths ...]

Now your hips and your lower belly. This is a place where many of us hold worry without knowing it. Breathe into it. You don't have to change anything. Just let the breath reach it. [... three breaths ...]

Your chest. Notice your heart beating, steady and unbothered by your thoughts. It's been doing this your whole life. Let it. [... two breaths ...]

Your shoulders. Let them drop, even a little. Your arms, your hands. Notice your fingers. [... two breaths ...]

Your neck, your jaw. Unclench your jaw. Let the tongue rest soft in your mouth. Your forehead, smooth. [... two breaths ...]

Now hold your whole body in your attention at once, from your feet to the top of your head, breathing. [... three breaths ...]

If a thought has carried you away, welcome back. That returning is the whole practice. Nothing went wrong. [... three breaths ...]

Take one more slow breath, a little deeper than the others. [...]

And when you're ready, let your eyes open. Notice the room. Notice how you feel, without deciding whether it's good enough. It is.

The science in one line each

Mindfulness programs improved anxiety and depression with moderate evidence across 47 trials (Goyal et al., JAMA Internal Medicine, 2014) · mindfulness training associated with lower inflammatory markers (Black & Slavich, Annals of the NY Academy of Sciences) · mindfulness program improved fertility quality of life in first-cycle IVF (Li et al., Behaviour Research and Therapy).

How to practise

- 5 minutes, same time, same chair. Morning before the phone, or bedtime after the yoga.
- Anchor it: "After I _____, I sit for five minutes."
- Wandering is the practice. Every return is a repetition.
- Sit if lying down puts you to sleep; lie down if sitting makes you fidget.
- If turning inward brings up more than you can hold (trauma history), keep eyes open, keep it short, focus on the feet, and consider a therapist alongside.
