

7-Day Nutrition Challenge Tracker

One theme a day, one tick a day, two numbers each evening · Module 2, Training 8

How it works

One theme per day, one task, one box. Everything else is optional. Anchor each task to something you already do (write the anchor in), prepare the night before, pair up with one person who gets a one-word "done" text, and tick the box with a pen. Habits form through repetition in a consistent context, not perfection: median 66 days to automatic, and a single missed day made no real difference to the outcome (Lally et al., European Journal of Social Psychology; Gardner, Lally & Wardle, British Journal of General Practice).

The week

DAY	THEME	THE ONE TASK	MY ANCHOR ("AFTER I...")	DONE	ENERGY 3 P.M. (1–10)	MOOD 9 P.M. (1–10)
1	Hydrate	Fill your pitcher/bottle to target in the morning and finish it		☐
2	Protein first	Eat a protein-first breakfast; notice your 3 p.m.		☐
3	Greens twice	A handful of leafy greens at two meals		☐
4	Ferment	One fermented food (sauerkraut, kefir, yogurt, kimchi, miso)		☐
5	Swap	Use your Training 2 swap once (even if the sweet thing follows)		☐
6	Plan & prep	Plan 3 meals for next week and prep one thing (eggs, soup, roasted tray)		☐

DAY	THEME	THE ONE TASK	MY ANCHOR ("AFTER I...")	DONE	ENERGY 3 P.M. (1–10)	MOOD 9 P.M. (1–10)
7	Celebrate & reflect	Complete the reflection below, share a win, do something kind that isn't food		☐

Cycle note (if you menstruate): cycle day on Day 1 _____. Days before a period bring stronger cravings and lower energy; keep the tasks and lower the bar.

If I miss a day

Missing a day is not restarting. The all-or-nothing story ("what-the-hell effect", Polivy & Herman) is what causes the overeating, and self-compassion after a slip reduces it (Adams & Leary, Journal of Social & Clinical Psychology).

I missed Day ____ because _____ and here's what I'll do next:

The task that felt easiest:

The task that made the biggest difference (what changed in my body or mood):

What surprised me:

The two habits I'll carry into next week (two, not seven):

1. _____

2. _____

Something kind I did for myself today that wasn't food:

Partner comparison (optional)

Same week, two chairs. What was different for each of us?
